We homeschool and neither of my boys' strong suit is reading. I've got one math lover and one history/science kid. We started with Level B in Kindergarten, my oldest used Level C in first grade (youngest will use C this year) and moving on to Level D this year for second grade. So for us, the recommended grade levels are spot on. If you have an advanced reader, I can see how you might want to go up a book. As for the repetition, that's one thing I love about these books. They understand the format, so they are concentrating on the content. I think it gives them some confidence and sense of control that they know what's coming and understand it when they get there. Every child is different, so you have to find what works best for each particular one. These have worked fabulously for both my boys. I have loved every Evan Moor product we've used and frequently recommend them to friends.

The main problem with this workbook is that it repeats the same worksheet format over and over for each new section--which gets old in rather short order. This has the effect of making learning tedious--not something you want to do with reading!!! My daughter much prefers the Sylvan workbooks. I won't be getting any more books from this series.

Hi !!!! If you are looking for a book for your 4-5 yr olds (and maybe even older children) ,who are showing interest in reading,this is the best book you can find..Excellent examples to explain long and short Vowels,Phonics,word endings, silent e etc. to your kids. The ALL in one Book !!! My daughter is five and I was browsing for some good books to get her interested in the Grammer behind good reading skills and found this book immensely helpful. I wish I had ordered the LevelA and LevelB books right from the time she started showing interest in reading...A MUST HAVE Book for all the children learning to read..... Another awesome book for sight words..."100 words your kid needs to know by grade 1" by Scholastic.

It's very helpful for my 5 year old son.

Excellent for 1st grade!
