I love the transparency of these... sure any tabs will work but the convenience of having these already typed up in an easy to read font is rather nice. I think the price is a bit high, but the usefulness makes splurging worth it... I added some pics of them installed so you can better see the transparency of them... hope it helps with your purchase decision..

.30 cents per sticky flag? Really? I was expecting something more than cheap 'post note flags' I was expecting something more than 36 cheap flags for $11 dollars. The picture makes each of the tabs appear like those semi-hard taps we all have seen in professional binders. Not these. These are lightly sticky, and bendable/crease-able. Way too much money for what these are. Even $5 dollars would be pushing it. Update: 08/08/2014 I found the tabs that I was expecting these to be for around $15+ shipping. <http://diagnostictabs.com/> If you compare the two you will understand what you are really buying with product.

I bought these because I couldn't find any other tabs for the DSM-V on here. I appreciate their purpose and it does definitely make it easier to find the sections/chapters in the DSM, however, they are pretty flimsy and I don't know how long they will last. I just put them in my DSM yesterday and some of them are already curling/creasing. The ones I've seen for the DSM-IV are a bit more permanent and sturdy, which is what I was hoping for, however I knew that I was taking a risk and would rather have these than no tabs at all. :) Pros: -Removable! -Easy to use -Clearly marks each section Cons: -Over priced -Flimsy -May or may not last through the next year.

These are terrible. Not worth $1 let alone $10+.... I expected something better than this. When the DSM-5 came out, I 'tabbed' one for one of my professors (I am the GA at our masters program) and they were well made, sturdy tabs. These tabs? Like scotch tape, with less 'stick'. Go somewhere else... this was not worth it.

Very disappointed with the page markers. I expected tabs for most major sections on such areas as ADHD, Autism, Specific Learning Disorder, etc., and there were only a few markers on the one page that was sent to me. Very overpriced for what I received. I would have been better off using Post-it Note tabs.

This was easier for me to do then to try to make taps myself like I do with my last day of him. I like the fact that they are removable, although when I tried to remove one to reposition it, tore my page. It is difficult to find what you're looking for, because they are transparent. Also only the sections are tabs and not the actual diagnoses. Overall, it's better than having to flip through.

I've read some reviews from other people here who have complained the page markers don't have the page numbers listed on them (I guess some other markers for the DSM IV did). Look at it this way: for those practitioners who have not taken the time to actually look through the DSM 5, it gives you an opportunity to get to know it better. Not only will it make you a better practitioner, but will also benefit your clients, as you will (hopefully) be diagnosing them with the most accurate, up-to-date diagnosis because you actually know the DSM 5! Anyway, these page markers are great! They come on one single sheet and are clearly marked with what section they are supposed to go on. And, they even give you 4 blank ones so you can customize them however you want! I put these in my DSM 5 last night and it looks very neat and organized and has become much more user friendly! I would highly recommend these, as they will be a lifesaver when you are frantically searching through your DSM 5 and trying to become accustomed to it!

Pros:1. Easy to read labels2. Repositionable3. Gives you 4 blank ones to customize however you want Cons:1. None!

I purchased these tabs to use with my DSM-5 paperback edition. I've previously only ever owned the hardcover editions so I wasn't sure how these stickers would hold up in a paperback, especially since some of the reviews posted here are not so positive. I was wrong! These tabs look good: they're transparent, so you can see through them to those underneath (you have about four rows of stickers to fit them all in). I got compliments from my clinical psychologist friend when she saw my DSM with tabs and she's going to order them too. The tabs are removable. I thought for sure that the tabs would rip the thin pages of the paperback edition, but they didn't (granted, I was very careful). The font style and size is easy to read. However, to get a decent font size, they've had to abbreviate some words but for anyone familiar with the DSM, it is easy enough to work out without any trouble. They're great value for the money. There are other tab sets you can buy and, admittedly, I haven't tried them, but they're much more expensive. These tabs do the trick for the price. I also like that they include a few extra tabs (blank) so you can add your own markers for those disorders you refer to a lot in your practice. I highly recommend these tabs! Thank you.
